Woody's Horseshoe Art

Woody Martinez is a Windsor, CO resident. He has been doing horseshoe art for many years, but mostly for his family. In 2022, due to an accident that left him unemployed, but able to work on his horseshoe art, he expanded the things he made and has many items on display at the farm. He will make custom pieces but, by far, the most popular ones at the farm are the horseshoe pumpkins. They don't rot, they don't blow away, they look great in the yard all year long. You can contact him at 970-388-6035. Woody is also one of the farm expert "chile roasters." I guess you can say you will find him "all fired up a lot of the time."

Nadine Haptonstall of Littleton is like family to the farm, having been friends since young adulthood. Nadine puts her artistic and crafting skills to work in all forms, from woodworking items, to recycle items, to just adorable creative one-on-a kind you-gotta-have pieces. Horse lovers will be sure to find something as Nadine's love and involvement in the "Westerners" appears in many items. Nadine is the one vendor that took the leap of faith three years ago when we decided to do a fall craft show at the farm and has been our loyal vendor. Be sure to let her know you appreciate all the extra effort and time she has taken the past three years to make the craft show such a success.

Mary Ravenkamp lives in southern Colorado and became acquainted with Tigges Farm when her granddaughter worked at the farm during her college years. Mary makes all kinds of wreaths for every season. Many of her fall wreaths will be on display (look up while at the farm as they are high above on a dividing partition) throughout the season but she will have other holiday and seasonal wreaths available at the craft show. She does not have a website, but you can reach her by texting 719-740-0737.

There could be some other crafters with things on display in the gift shop, so check out this "diamond in the dust" surprise gift shop.

TIGGES FARM FAMILY CRAFTERS

Many of the big extended family of Tigges Farm are artisans and crafters, but we put them to work in October at the cash register, weighing pumpkins, helping roast peppers, stocking, cleaning, and doing whatever needs to be done to keep the farm running smoothly, so you won't find them holding down a craft booth, but you will find their artistic and creative talents throughout the gift shop the whole season - August thru October.

Kim O Creations

Kim Oelschlager is one of the talented Tigges Farm family members and resides in Windsor. A crafter and artist she does macramé, totes, bracelets, and the so in fashion, this year, shirts with sayings on the back. And if you want to go in fashion with a tote, she has made a bunch of tote's perfect for shopping. You will also find crocheted and knitted winter hats, each one of a kind. Or if you want a wall decor check out her pen and ink sketches or macramé. Gale's Gourd's and Gifts

Gale Loeffler lives in Englewood and she has been rocking it this year. Her painted rocks are always popular, from small pocket pumpkins to fun veggies to very intricate designs. Her painted gourds are amazing in detail or just plain in the spirit of fun! Gale also knits winter hats and scarves. They may not be the most popular item in August, but they fly out of the gift shop on those cold October days. Gale also makes the every so popular Microwave Mitts - no more piping hot dish to take out of the microwave.

RickArt

Kathy Rickart lives across the road from Tigges Farm and during the winter months, when the days are short she spends time ignoring how quickly it gets dark by keeping her crochet hook busy. Owls and pumpkins are a favorite and seem to fit a fall centered gift shop. Then there are those worn out jeans she recycles into "Fancy Pants Aprons," and Pinto Bean bags into totes.
